

Brain and Spinal Cord Injuries

Traumatic Brain Injuries

Unlike other types of injuries, it is not always obvious when a person is suffering from a brain injury. Often referred to as “invisible injuries” brain injuries typically manifest themselves as cognitive, emotional or behavioural symptoms, and cannot be seen from outward appearance. Nevertheless, these injuries can have a devastating impact on someone’s life and the lives of the people around them.

Cases involving head injuries or traumatic brain injuries require an experienced team that consists of both medical and legal professionals to ensure the injured person receives the treatment they need. McKenzie Lake Lawyers can help. Our firm will advocate for your rehabilitation and care needs as well as fair compensation.

If you or someone you know has suffered a traumatic brain injury, contact our experienced personal injury lawyers at McKenzie Lake Lawyers LLP in London, Ontario, for a free initial consultation to discuss what you or someone close to you may be entitled to.

Spinal Cord Injuries

Suffering a spinal cord injury can have a devastating impact on the life of an injured person and on that individual's friends and family. Those suffering from this kind of injury may be forced to endure challenging rehabilitation and the difficult process of adjusting to life in new circumstances. Family members and friends may also be required to make changes in their lives to ensure their loved one is appropriately supported and cared for.
