

Family Mediation

Many family law litigants frustrated by the court system have often said, “there has to be a better way!” We listened.

Mediation offers an alternative for parties to resolve their family law matters using the mediator as a neutral facilitator. The process is generally a more timely and less expensive option than going to court. It has proved to be highly popular and successful in achieving resolution for parties. It has the additional advantages of being a confidential process that focuses on the needs and interest of parties and is less adversarial.
